VOLUME 24 | Entered at the Post Office at Janesville, Wis., as second-class matter. | JANESVILLE, WISCONSIN, FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 11, 1881. | Published Every Evening Except Sunday, at $7 a Year. | NUMBER 288

Governor Smith has issued twenty-eight pardons during the year 1880.

Cabinet makers are still bewildered at the ability of General Garfield to keep his mouth shut.

Over one half of the bills introduced in the Wisconsin Legislature will be indefinitely postponed.

It will generally be admitted that Senator Conkling has something to say about politics in New York.

There are four hundred cheese factories in Wisconsin, and the value of the product last year was about ten million dollars.

The number of bills introduced in the Legislature this session is 767—245 in the Senate and 522 in the Assembly. This is 113 more than the session of 1880.

Sparks, Springer, and Cox, do not seem to object to the inaugural ceremonies going on on the 4th of March. It is very kind in them to allow General Garfield to be inaugurated.

When Senator Conkling makes his speech in answer to "Humburg" Butler, that South Carolina Senator will not think himself worth as much as "the last rose of last summer."

The committee on charitable and penal institutions are hard at work on the report of the special committee that investigated the management of the State hospital for the insane.

Assemblyman Lawrence has introduced a bill in the Legislature to create a municipal court for Rock county. We presume it bears a close relationship to the one introduced last winter, and which did not pass.

The Democrats begin to think the country should thank them because they did not go into revolution over the defeat of Hancock. That is like a man demanding applause because he abstained from cutting his own throat.

The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway company paid into the State treasury in 1879, $220,327,35, and the Chicago & Northwestern, $138,091.54. The total paid into the treasury by all roads operated in the State, was $418,148-76.

We publish in our telegraphic columns an interesting synopsis of the important bill framed by Senator Sutherland, of Fond du Lac, which will accompany his report on the management of the State hospital at Madison. It proposes a radical change in the management of our State institutions, and judging from the salaries to be paid, the new board which shall have supervision of our charitable and penal institution, the expense will be greater than the present system. It has some good points in it, however, but whether it will pass is a question around which there centers a good many doubts. The reckless manner in which the State hospital has been managed by its local board, has created a great deal of prejudice against the present system of managing our State institutions, and hence the bill prepared by Senator Sutherland.

The thirty-eighth annual statement of the Mutual Life Insurance company, printed in to-day's Gazette, is a business-like document. It compactly sets forth in the plainest manner the actual condition of the company, and shows precisely what has been its receipts and disbursements during the past year. It is gratifying to note the continued prosperity of this great company. In all directions it has prospered. Its assets reach nearly $92,000,000; its income has been over $17,000,000; it paid to policy-holders above $13,000,000 in the shape of dividends, endowments, and additions; while its surplus is over $11,000,000 by the New York standard. The policies in force number 98,000, the assets furnishing security for risks amounting to more than three hundred millions of dollars. It does not seem possible to supplement the figures with anything that can add to the strength of this great company, or that can attach a stronger seal of approval upon its wise and conservative management.

ABOUT PRESIDENT HAYES.

President Hayes will go out of office surrounded by peculiar circumstances. He will take with him the respect of some people irrespective of party, but he will not have the lasting confidence of the Republican party generally, and the Democratic party will never forget to think of him as the "fraudulent" President. There can be no doubt in the minds of intelligent and fair-minded men as to his right to the great office which he has held for four years. That matter was settled by one of the highest commission ever organized in the United States. It was a scheme proposed by the Democrats themselves with a solemn promise to abide by its decision; but notwithstanding this they have followed him with the cry of "fraud" and as a party have been unrelenting in their hostility to his administration.

President Hayes will be regarded as an honest man—probably not honest in all he has said to men seeking office—but honest in his efforts to reform the civil service, and to give the country an economical administration. In the language of a prominent Democratic paper he has made a "fair President." That is the sum and substance of the whole matter. He has not been brilliant, he has not been impartial, and in all cases he has not been just. He has picked quarrels with party factions. He has snubbed Republicans who did not agree with him, and has very kindly and generously remembered his relatives in Ohio. He has promised to do a great many things which he never thought of doing and therefore never did, and has done a great many things which he promised he would not do.

In some respects his administration has been a conspicuous failure. He failed to conciliate the South by toadying to the Democratic leaders there. He failed to secure the good will and confidence of the South by appointing Democrats to office, and placing an ex-rebel general in his cabinet. He failed to understand the practical principles of civil service reform when he issued his famous Order No. 1. He failed to show common manliness and ordinary statesmanship when he undertook to kick stalwarts out of office. He failed when he began a warfare against Senator Conkling in the matter of Federal appointments in New York. He failed when he did not have the courage to stand up for his friends and the right, and to say no and stick to it.

On the other hand President Hayes has done some things for which he is to be complimented. During the famous extra session he stood firmly by the leading Republicans, and for a time proved a stalwart with a heavy backbone. During his administration there have been exceedingly few defalcations or any malfeasance in office. The revenues have been honestly and economically collected. The government money has been safely disbursed. All departments of the government over which the Republicans have had control have been very successfully administered, and all in all his administration will be counted a good one. It will be regretted that he did not frame his policy so as to have accomplished the same economy, and at the same time win the abiding confidence of the masses and the leaders of the party which placed him in office.

BIENNIAL SESSIONS OF THE LEGISLATURE.

The question of biennial sessions of the Legislature, is one that has agitated the people of most of the States to a considerable extent; and now it is being considered by the people of Wisconsin.—State Journal.

It is easy to account for the prejudice in Madison against biennial sessions of the Legislature. The people there would be more righteous than the people of any other city did they not tenaciously cling to the principle of annual sessions. It is a good thing for Madison that there are annual sessions. It is a good thing for the boarding houses that there are annual sessions. It is a good thing for the newspapers that the Legislature meets every winter. Without annual sessions Madison would be a dull town, and without them the newspapers would find it hard picking in the capitol city. This accounts for the zeal of the Journal and Democrat in holding fast to annual sessions. The town has got a pretty good thing in them, and it does not want to lose them, any more than Janesville wants to lose its large and prosperous cotton mill.

But the State Journal is mistaken in the idea that the subject is being deeply agitated in other States where biennial sessions are held, and that monopolies and powerful corporations are loudest in demanding biennial sessions. If there is any agitation regarding the question of annual or biennial sessions, it is in States that have annual sessions, and where there is a demand for biennial sessions. During the past ten years there has been a great change in public sentiment on the question of holding sessions of State Legislatures biennially. In 1870, when there were thirty-seven States in the Union, there were only sixteen States whose Legislatures were held biennially. But in 1881, with thirty-eight States in the Union, thirty one States hold biennial sessions of their Legislatures.

If the principle of biennial sessions was a wrong one, if that system is expensive, and detrimental to public interest, will of the State Journal or some other journal, tell us why it is that there has been such a rapid increase in the number of States holding biennial sessions? If it was a dangerous change, and contrary to public policy, there would not be that significant change from annual to biennial sessions; and if the former were better than the latter, the States which have tried both, would soon return to annual sessions. But among all the thirty-one States that have adopted the biennial session system, we do not hear of one where the people demand a change. This seems to be a sufficient answer to the arguments which the State Journal or any other paper makes against biennial sessions.

The Gazette is not factious or stubborn in the matter of holding biennial sessions. It does not pretend to know which is the most economical and the best. It does believe biennial sessions should be tried in Wisconsin as there is a strong sentiment in their favor; and it is firmly of the opinion that the Legislature would be derelict in its duty did it not make provision for a submission of the question to the people. This is the position tion of the Gazette. It took the same grounds last winter, and holds that position still.

BADLY BITTEN.

Peter Kieffer, corner Clinton and Bennett streets, Buffalo, says: I was badly bitten by a horse a few days ago and was induced by a friend who witnessed the occurence to try Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. It relieved the pain almost immediately, and in four days the wound was completely healed. Nothing can be better for fresh wounds.

A Radical Reform in the Management of Our State Institutions—A Synopsis of Senator Sutherland's Bill.

Special to The Republican.

MADISON, Feb, 9—Senator Sutherland's bill, to accompany his report on the investigation of the Madison hospital for the insane, was completed to-night. It covers 30 pages of legal cap paper, and is pronounced a perfect bill. It abolishes the trustees and managers of the State prison, two insane hospitals, school for deaf and dumb, school for blind, and industrial school for boys, and gives the Governor power to appoint as a "State board of supervision of Wisconsin charitable, reformatory and penal institutions" three persons, citizens of Wisconsin, whose ages shall be be between 30 and 50 years and whose salaries shall be $3,000 each per year. This board may expend $2,000 for clerk hire, and have paid all necessary traveling expenses. The board shall have an office at Madison and visit the above institutions twice each month. The treasurer of the board shall give penal bond in the sum of $100,000, and shall pay all the bills of all the institutions. The members of the board shall hold office six years, except that the first board shall go out, one in two, one in four and one in six years. The bill provides that the superintendent of the insane hospitals shall only have charge of patients, and the stewards shall attend to all the necessary business. The superintendent of each institution shall report monthly to the board in detail all expenses and purchases, and the board can investigate any books of, or charges against any institution. All bills and accounts must be approved by the full board, and in November of each year a full report of all proceedings, expenses and reports of the several institutions shall be made to the governor. The board will be vested with numerous discretionary powers as to governing the various institutions, admitting or discharging inmates, hiring employes, etc.

The bill also provides that the governor shall appoint a "commissioner of public charities," with a salary of $3,000 and necessary traveling expenses. He shall look over, investigate and report upon all the county poor houses, jails, asylums and other State charitable and penal institutions not controlled by the first mentioned board. He shall have power to prescribe food, clothing, and treatment in all local institutions; investigate them in every way, and have general supervisory control thereof. He may also condemn any local institution, and have its inmates sent to some other place until suitably provided for. He shall have power to make complaint against the managers to any judge, and said judge may remove said officer so complained of. He shall also make full reports annually to the governor.

VICE-PRESIDENT ARTHUR.

A Story that He is a Canadian by Birth, and not Eligible to the Vice-Presidency.

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—The Sun's Washington special says: "The Senate committee on privileges and elections has been furnished with what is said to be evidence, which it refuses to reveal, that General Chester A. Arthur is not eligible to the Vice-Presidency. Vague and untrustworthy reports have been in circulation for some time to the effect that he was born in Canada. Whatever the real evidence is, it is said to have impressed some members of the committee as important enough to justify an investigation, with the view to prevent the assumption of the office by General Arthur if it be found he is constitutionally debarred. Senator Edmunds is reported to have said that such an investigation, after it had been made and its results established, would not be acknowledged either by the committee, or any member thereof, for they would be ashamed of themselves for having made it.

CALLING NAMES.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—The river and harbor bill was discussed in the House again yesterday, but no action was taken thereon. Several members complained that their particular districts were overlooked by the committee on commerce, while several other members expressed themselves fully satisfied. Mr. Robeson expressed his purpose to vote against the item for the improvement of the Mississippi river, which he characterized as a scheme to benefit private property at the public expense. The eastern members generally seemed opposed to the bill. The chief incident of the debate, however, was the "flare-up" between Cox and Reagan. The latter took objection to the "ill-natured and ungenerous flings" which Cox indulged in a few days ago at the expense of the committee on commerce and his (Reagan's) expense in particular. Cox did not mend matters by insinuating, in his peculiar waspish manner, that Reagan was pursuing his private interest at the expense of the general interest. Some lively sparring then took place, during which Cox reminded Reagan that he was a rebel while he (Cox) was a loyal man. Reagan retorted by implying that Cox was a demagogue. Finally, and after it looked as if the two Democratic members would not be satisfied without goth Cox expressed sorrow for his exhibition of temper, and the Republicans sadly witnessed the curtain fall on the live'y scene.

FRIGHTFUL EXPLOSION.

CLEVELAND, Feb. 10—A Leader special from the scene of the explosion a few miles south of Salem says: A man named Smith was going into the mine, when the superintendent cautioned him about going to a certain room, as it contained fire damp. But as that was dry, while around the track was filled with water, Smith disobeyed orders and attempted to pass through the forbidden room with a lighted lamp in his hat. Immediately a terrific explosion occurred, blowing through fifteen feet of earth composing the roof, and carrying death and destruction to all around. About twenty men were at work in the mine, six of whom were killed outright, and a number dangerously wounded. A mule and train of eight cars were shot out of the main entrance as if from a cannon. Another mule drawing a cart in which a man was seated, was blown on top of the cart, killing the driver. A dog was also blown out of the mine. One man, Jackson Leck, just entering, was blown back and over a huge railroad embankment into the creek below. He is badly hurt. The men not disabled or killed escaped through a shaft to the open air.

GOVERNOR WASHBURN.

LA CROSSE, Feb. 10—Ex-Governor Washburn's condition to-day is a slight improvement over that of the past, and those attending him think there has been a change for the better in the past three days. The Hon. E. B. Washburne and Dr. Isham, of Chicago, arrived in the city yesterday, and the doctor considers the case a mild form of paralytic stroke, but without the usual dangers attendant. In this he agrees with the doctors in this place. His mind is and has been perfectly clear, and his condition is not at all dangerous, although it is said it will be a long time before he is able to be out. It is feared, however, that his eyesight may be somewhat impared, of which he complains occasionally.

ASPHYXIATED.

MILWAUKEE, Feb. 10.—Henry MacMakin, news dealer at the soldier's home, has been missing since last Monday until this afternoon, when he was discovered lying on a bunk in the old hospital, with life extinct from the effects of coal-gas. He and a comrade named Langler, went into a room to take a nap and must have closed the drafts of the coal stove. Langler was still breathing when they were discovered, and may recover. MacMakin owned a farm in Illinois, and belonged to a respectable family in that State. He was much respected in that State.

FIRE AT OCONOMOWOC.

OCONOMOWOC, Feb. 10.—A fire broke out at 10 o'clock to-night, in the boot and shoe store of Nash & Coyle, and, before the engine could be brought to the fire, the flames had spread to the adjoining furniture store of H. F. Lyke. Loss on building, $6,000; covered mostly by insurance. The greatest part of the goods were saved.

DECISIVE ACTION.

MILWAUKEE, Feb. 10.—At a meeting of the Land League here this evening a resolution was adopted that the members hereafter refuse to buy any goods of English manufacture, and recommending other leagues to form a similar conclusion.

American Locomotives.

The Railroad Gazette says: "It has so long been the fashion in this country to assume and assert the superiority of American locomotives over those of all the rest of the world, that it will, perhaps, excite a ripple, or maybe a storm, of animadversion, to admit frankly that in construction of boilers our European competitors often excel us. This fact is sometimes acknowledged by American mechanical engineers who visit Europe and see the work done there, and it is generally indicated by the descriptions and specifications of boilers which come to us through the engineering literature from the other side of the Atlantic." Our contemporary then describes, at length, the boilers of some engines designed by Mr. Massey Bromley for the Great Eastern railway, and concludes by saying: "Altogether the construction of this boiler has much that American engineers could imitate to advantage, and as was said in the beginning of this article, is in many respects superior to our own practice."

Blessing 20,000 Throats.

Owing to the prevalence of diphtheria in Brooklyn, Father Fransioli, of St. Peter's church, announced to his congregation last Sunday that the ceremony common in Italy of blessing the throats of any who desire it would be performed Thursday. The four curates and the pastor were kept busy from six o'clock until eleven Thursday morning performing the ceremony, and it is estimated that 20,000 men, women and children visited the church for the purpose. The applicant kneeled at the altar rail, and the priest, holding two lighted candles crossed and tied with a ribbon under the applicant's chin, recited a prayer in Latin, asking through St. Blase for God's blessing. "This ceremony," said Father Walsh, "is celebrated yearly in nearly all the Catholic countries of Europe, but seldom here. The saint through whom the blessing is asked was a bishop of Sebaste in Armenia, 1,500 years ago, and was celebrated for his miraculous cures of throat diseases."

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE CITY

CLEVERLY DONE.

The Blowing up of the Chilian Transport Loa, off Callao.

As I sit in the shade of the starboard railing writing this, says the Callao correspondent of the San Francisco Chronicle, I see the Blanco and Huascar putting slowly out from under cover of San Lorenzo point, and know that they will steam up to within a respectable distance of the shore guns, open fire, and after a shot or two retire to their old anchorage. There, already, a white puff leaves the Huascar's side, and by the time this sentence is finished the boom of the report will have reached my ears. The Chilians have the best ordnance, and, which is of much more consequence, have Americans to handle it. Nor is the other side without its recruits from soldiers of fortune hailing from the United States. The last exploit by one of these has created a considerable stir, and has already been referred to as the disaster to the Loa. It occurred the day before we arrived here, but every one is full of the affair, and these are some of the facts, all of which may not have reached you by telegraph: On the 24th of last month the Chilian transport Loa brought four hundred and six Peruvian soldiers—somehow or other the officers do not turn up again—to Callao, and after landing them took her place among the blockaders. The day before yesterday afternoon the Loa, while patrolling the coast between San Lorenzo and Ancon, saw a boat beating about the Hormigas de Terra. The craft's movements were so suspicious that the Loa lowered two boats and gave chase, when the occupant took to a small canoe he had in tow of the large boat, and using his paddle vigorously escaped to the shore. The Chilians found their prize to be a launch containing vegetables and garden stuff of all descriptions—a perfect bonanza for a vessel on the blockade. No time was lost in towing the prize alongside the transport, nor was any lost in transferring the welcome contents to her deck. It took actually about ten minutes to get the vegetables on board, and every thing was out excepting a bag of potatoes, which lay in the bottom of the boat. This they had hooked on to and were hauling away, when it seemed as if the fuse of a thunderbolt had been touched. A great mass of flame appeared to rise out of the very sea and envelop the Loa, which at that moment was in front of the last of the neutral vessels at anchor to leeward of the bay. Immediately afterwards a second explosion was heard, less heavy than the first, and the doomed vessel was covered up and completely hidden by dense clouds of black smoke. When the smoke cleared away those on board the yet shaking vessels in the bay saw the Loa immovable and apparently undamaged, when suddenly she appeared to stagger and reel, her bows rose in the air and with a great plunge she went down, stern foremost, leaving only an immense volume of steam hanging like a pall over her watery grave. The water was not deep enough to totally engulf the Loa and the tops of her two masts remained visible, with some of the crew clinging to them. That crew had numbered one hundred and eighty officers and men, and though they all went down in her some floated to the surface and were picked up by the English corvette Penguin and boats from the other neutral vessels of war to the number of about thirty as they were struggling in the water. A Chilian transport, then eight miles off, steered to the scene of the disaster at full speed and received the saved, nearly all of whom, however, were wounded. It was dynamite under that fatal bag of potatoes. The business was engineered by a down-Easter named Col. Williams, who holds rank in the Peruvian army, and who may congratulate himself upon the successful achievement of as smart a murdering war trick as is on record. It may also be some satisfaction to him to read that the opinion of those forming the flower of maritime war powers is unanimous that it was cleverly done.

VERY DANGEROUS.

F. Burrows, of the firm of Burrows & Winstonley, Sarnia and Wilkesport, writes that he was cured of a very dangerous case of inflammation of the lungs solely by the use of five bottles of Electric Oil. Feels great pleasure in recommending it to the public, as he had proved it, for many of the diseases it mentions to cure, through his friends, and in nearly every instance it was effectual. A North German Village.

THE village of Y—— is only one of the thousands with which the country is literally peppered. It possesses most of the qualities, good, bad and otherwise, which they share in common, at least in this province. At a distance they are picturesque; but if one desires to preserve one's illusions, one must not come too near. They do look well in pictures—rude cottages, filthy puddles and all; but then artists can not, and would not, paint the smells. This particular village consists of a hundred or so small cottages, built of rough stone, the old thatched with straw, the new with tiles. They are not unsightly in themselves, especially in summer, nestling in orchards, hedges and gardens, but their surroundings are abominable. Before each door is a huge dung-hill (mit Respect zu sagen), where hens and swine dispute the territory, and evil-smelling green puddles, where geese, ducks and dirty children whose hair is bleached white with exposure to the sun, paddle together in placid bliss from morn till dewy eve. So far from trying to keep such necessary adjuncts of agricultural life as dung-hills, etc., etc., out of sight, as is our American custom, they are here given the place d'honneur, and I fancy the family pretensions to rank are gauged in accordance with the more or less rapid accumulations of these manure heaps.

Old men and women, beyond more active service, sit in the door-ways and keep the feathered and unfeathered bipeds within bounds. Their faces are brown and wrinkled, like dried pears, their bodies bent and shriveled, but their tongues wag vigorously, and they knit incessantly, both sexes, upon coarse woolen socks. There is no church at Y——, the people attending service at a neighboring village. The dignitary of the place seemed to be the school-master, whose cottage was distinguishable from the rest by an air of superior neatness and the presence of a pretty garden full of well-cared-for flowers. There is here, as in all villages, a green where the peasants meet for recreation, windmills on every little hill-top, and a well-filled, dreary old churchyard, which for barrenness would vie with any New England country burying-ground. There are no shops, not even a bakery, all purchases being made in the distant town. —Atlantic Monthly.

Powerful Ocean Steamships.

TWENTY years ago the largest steamers known (in this, as in all such comparisons, neglecting the Great Eastern, which was a prodigy of engineering skill) did not reach over 350 feet in length, 45 feet in breadth, 3,500 tons in tonnage, or 4,000-horse power indicated. We have before us at this moment a list of fifty merchant steamers sailing, in the year 1860, from Southampton and other Southern ports, which the largest vessels then frequented, and the list includes but 10 ships of more than 300 feet in length, none of which reached the limits of size and power just given, and the whole of which belonged to two companies, viz: the Royal Mail and the Peninsular and Oriental. At the present moment we have afloat and at work the White Star Liners, some of them 455 feet in length, 45 feet in breadth, and nearly 5,000 indicated horse power; the Inman Liners, comprising such ships as the City of Berlin, 488 feet by 44 1-2 feet broad, and of about the same steam power; the Orient, of 445 by 46 1-4 feet, with engines developing 5,600 horse power; the Arizona, of about the same size, with still greater steam power and speed; and many other splendid vessels but little inferior to any of the foregoing. And these grand steamers—many of which reach the quays of New York with greater punctuality than railway trains reach the London suburbs from Victoria and Charing Cross, and would reach our quays with equal punctuality if they could avoid the abominable sands that bar the Mersey—are the forerunners of still larger and more powerful vessels now taking shape on the banks of the Clyde and elsewhere. The Cunard steel ship, the Servia, now building by Messrs. Thompson, of Glasgow, is 500 feet by 50 feet, with over 10,000 indicated horse-power, and will, therefore, doubtless possess a speed considerably in advance of that of the very fastest ship at present afloat in the mercantile marine. The Inman steamship City of Rome, building of iron at Barrow, will be still larger, having a length of 546 feet, a breadth of 52 feet, a gross registered tonnage of 8,000, and a steam power nearly equal to that of the Servia. The Guion Line is to be increased by ships of almost equal size and power, and the Allen Line is building others equal to the finest of the White Star boats. Notwithstanding the number and magnitude of the passenger steamers now running between America and this country, the traffic is so great that it has only been possible to secure accommodations by arranging passages many weeks, and even months, in advance, while the rapidly increasing population and wealth of the United States and Canada make it certain that the interchange of agricultural produce and manufactured goods between them and ourselves will go on increasing.—London Times.

Betrayed by the Truth.

THE very amiable and worthy occupant of the position of British Vice-Consul at a port in the far East had often expressed to his American fellow-residents his desire to visit their country, and make himself acquainted with their institutions. His ideas of the West had been formed by a perusal of the works of Cooper, and it is to be feared that his interlocutors had purposely abstained from disturbing his somewhat highly colored expectations. Finally a furlough came to him, and he made ready to carry out his cherished plan of a trip home by way of the Pacific Ocean and the United States. Introductions were given him to trusty practical jokers in San Francisco, which he presented, on arrival, with expressions of vehement desire to encounter Indians and hunt buffaloes. This, he was told, would be easy, as both abounded in the neighborhood of the Cliff House, and the peaceful and prosaic suburb of Oakland. An expedition was planned and carried out, and the British brother, armed to the teeth, performed great deeds in the encounter with "practicable" Indians and buffaloes—furnished, it was whispered, by a theater and a circus menagerie. Exulting in the praise of his American friends, and covered with glory, he departed for New York and England. His fame stood him in good stead at dinners and other social gatherings during his entire vacation, and preceded him on his return to his post, and made him quite a hero among his fellow exiles. No American could find it in his heart to disturb it, and all might have gone well to this day had he only confined himself to his character of amateur Leatherstocking. One day, however, a countryman of his came to a "Yankee" and denounced this hero. "Just think of that M——," said he, "trying to sell us. By Jove! I never heard in all my life, you know, such atrocious stories as he has been telling us. What do you think he tried to make us believe? It is all very fine to have shot no end of Indians and buffaloes. Of course, you know, where there are so many as there are in San Francisco and New Hampshire and Niagara, and all those places, a plucky fellow might do that. But he has actually tried to make us believe the most extraordinary story that you have ever heard about your country, you know. He says that he went to a place called Chicago, and he went to draw some money from a bank, and found that they had raised it up and were moving it, with all the fellows inside, you know, going on with their work! I say! just fancy the cheek of the fellow, supposing he could make us believe that!" Alas! the one true story which the poor Consul told had proved his undoing.—A. A. Hayes, Jr. in Harper's Magazine.

ON the 10th inst. the usual quiet of the Chinese Consulate was broken into by the sudden advent of a young Chinese girl who had just made her escape from a band of high-binders and threw herself upon the protection of the Consul, explaining to him at the same time that there was a young Chinese merchant, by name Low Quong Kow, who was trying to get her for a wife and she was anxious to marry him, and these high-binders were preventing her from doing so. Thereupon the Consul sent her to the Mission Presbyterian Home on Sacramento Street, and instituted inquiries regarding the character of Low Quong Kow. Finding all satisfactory, and that he was abundantly able to take care of the girl, whose name was Chun Chogyook, he brought them together in his private office three days ago and after having procured a marriage license he sent for the Rev. Otis Gibson. At the request of the Consul, Mr. Gibson subjected the man to a rigid examination as to whether he already had a wife here or in China and his ability to support a wife, all of which questions were answered satisfactorily. Then the girl was questioned as to her object in marrying him. She replied that she loved him, and besides she wanted some one to take care of her. The ceremony was then performed in true Christian style, though in the Chinese dialect, in the presence of the entire Chinese legation and several visitors who happened to be calling at the Consulate at the time. After the marriage rites the young husband took his bride to her new home on Stockton Street, which he had provided for her reception.—San Francisco Chronicle.

HOME AND FARM.

BAD drivers generally spoil good horses.

A HINT FOR GARDENERS.—The handles of pruning-knives and all other implements liable to be lost, should be painted of a bright red. The handles of knives and other small tools are usually of a color so near that of the soil, or that of the branches of trees and vines, that it is not easy to find them, if misplaced.

CIDER made very late in the season and stored in a cool place will keep sweet, because active fermentation is prevented. If it is rich and sweet when it comes from the press, and care is exercised in making it from good, sound apples, it will not become sour if kept in a moderately cool cellar in a tight cask or in bottles.

COCOANUT CUSTARD.—Place one dozen cocoanut balls (procured from any confectioner) in a pudding-dish, and over them pour, while it is hot, a boiled custard made of one quart of milk, the yelks of five and the whites of three eggs well beaten, five tablespoonfuls of white sugar, (a little more or less to suit the individual taste,) one tablespoonful of corn starch, wet with a little cold milk, stirred in carefully to prevent lumping, and two teaspoonfuls of extract of vanilla; have the two remaining whites beaten stiff, with a little sugar added; spread over the top of the custard and set into the oven to brown slightly; then put the pudding aside to cool. It should be perfectly cold when eaten.

A WRITER in the Ohio Farmer says that he is not an old wheat raiser, but has not lived these last few years to no purpose, and thinks he has struck the keynote of success in raising wheat, in a thorough fitting of the soil before sowing the seed, and he is convinced that a poor piece of land, dragged, rolled, and then refitted until the ground is as mellow as an "ash heap," will produce a better yield of wheat than a rich piece of land poorly plowed, half dragged and the seed scattered among the lumps and clods, and a portion of it without covering or any chance to germinate or obtain a hold.

BOILED CHOCOLATE CUSTARD.—Grate a quarter of a pound of unsweetened chocolate, and put in a half pint of hot water on the stove to dissolve; it need not boil, but requires occasional stirring; beat up four eggs, yelks and whites together, with half a pound of pulverized sugar, and pour over it a quart of boiled milk; then stir in the chocolate; strain the whole through a fine sieve, put back on the fire, and stir continually with a wooden spoon till it thickens, which it will do in about three to five minutes; when cool enough put in the bowl it is to be served in, and keep on ice till you are ready to use.

MINCED FOWL.—Take the remains of a cold roast fowl and cut off the white meat, which mince finely without any skin or bone; but put the bone and skin into a stewpan with an onion, a blade of mace, and a handful of sweet herbs tied up. Add nearly a pint of water. Let it stew for an hour, and then strain and pour off the gravy, putting in a teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce. Take two hard-boiled eggs and chop them small; mix them with the fowl, and salt, pepper and mace according to taste; put in the gravy, also half a teaspoonful of very finely-minced lemon-peel, and one tablespoonful of lemon-juice, two tablespoonsful of flour, made into a smooth paste with a little cold water, and let the whole just boil. Serve with sippets of toasted bread. Some persons prefer cayenne to white pepper.

IN an alley off Hastings Street, just back of a tumbledown rookery, a member of the sanitary police squad found a man lying under a wagon and inquired if he was ill. The man pointed to the old house, cautioned the officer to speak low, and replied:

"I'm the husband of the woman you see hanging out clothes over there."

"And why are you hiding here?"

"I've been off on a spree for a whole week."

"Ah! I see. It is the return of the prodigal."

"Wuss than that, sir. The prodigal had no wife and he didn't steal the rent-money to get drunk on. Oh, I'll catch it, sir, if you don't intercede for me."

"But what can I do?"

"You slip around to the front of the house and say that you have news for her. Watch her face and see how she takes it. Then tell her it is about me. Watch and see if she gets white around the mouth. Tell her that you have news that I was drowned at the ferry dock. Watch her tears at this point. Tell her that I called her dear name as I went down for the last time. Watch and see if that melts her. If I can get her all broken down and overcome I'll bust in on her and get her forgiveness before she gets over wiping her eyes and pulling her nose. Go, on, now, and I'll owe you a debt of gratitude all my life. I think Mary will melt under your soft words."

The officer slipped around and told the wife that her husband was hiding in the alley, and then took a position where he could witness what followed. He had hardly secured it when the man came down the alley on a gallop, followed at a short distance by the wife, armed with a hoe-handle. There were no words spoken, but the man simply threw up clouds of dust with his heels as he put on the steam, and as he passed the officer he somewhat curtly observed:

"Ah! but you ain't worth shucks at the melting business!"—Detroit Free Press.

THE New York correspondent of the Troy Times writes: "Our preachers as a profession are very healthy, and it is for this reason that the death of Adams has occasioned such general notice. It is looked on as an unusual thing for a preacher to be laid up from work. Life insurance companies always prefer risks on this class, and perhaps their temperate habits have much to do with their longivity. Looking at the profession, the following brief record may be given: Among the Baptists William R. Williams stands prominent. He has been preaching for more than forty years, and is now seventy-six. Vermilye, the senior Reformed Dutch pastor is seventy-seven. Fifty-five years have elapsed since his ordination. The senior Tyng is now in his eighty-first year, and it is fifty-nine years since he entered the ministry. These men belong to the retired list. There are, however, instances of working clergy who have reached a mature age. Elbert S. Porter, of the Reformed Church, is sixty. Ormiston is but a year younger, and Chambers is sixty-one."

H. A. PATTERSON, P. M.

Gould's Influence in Wall Street.

A RECENT New York letter to the Cincinnati Enquirer says: Wall Street is awakening to the fact that Jay Gould can do as he pleases with the stock market. The quiet little man who slips down to his office in a cab, and slips back again to his home, and is never seen in public, never had the Stock Exchange under such complete control as of late. He engineered the great decline in prices last spring, guided the great boom of early summer, and now seems to have set out to depress them again. He threw a whole shower of hand-grenades into the ranks of the bulls to-day, and scattered them.

The trouble began with Western Union. It had been said that Mr. Gould and his party had obtained enough stock to control the election and insure a traffic arrangement with the American Union. Just as the street was comfortably settled in this belief, and many were buying Western Union, expecting to see it go up, the story was started by Gould's own men that this was not so; that the telegraph war was to be opened in real earnest by a general slashing of rates. At the same time came the announcement, which was true, that American Union stock is to be put upon the Stock Exchange list tomorrow at a high figure. Private sales were made to-day at 72 and 74, and the report of the actuary, to be published to-morrow, will show that it can easily earn 7 per cent. on its capital of $20,000,000. The effect was to crush the price of Western Union 4 per cent. in less than sixty minutes. It rattled down from 101 1-2 so fast that the telegraph operators couldn't keep up with the sales. The favorable report of American Union and the sharp bidding for it on the floor of the Exchange that is now promised for to-morrow threaten to depress Western Union yet further.

It pleased Mr. Gould further to hammer the general list. So he started a new report that he would extend his Wabash system from Toledo to Buffalo, in opposition to the Lake Shore. This was published in a morning newspaper, and the result was a decline in Lake Shore, Michigan Central and New York Central. Mr. Gould is said to be short of Wabash, Hannibal and St. Joe, Kansas and Texas and Iron Mountain. To help these along down he caused it to be said, as by authority, that the Wabash war with Chicago, Burlington and Quincy is to be continued with increased vigor. Burlington and Quincy tumbled from points even quicker than had Western Union. The Wabash company fell in line for 2 1-2 per cent. on the preferred. Iron Mountain was close behind them while Kansas and Texas closed up the rear a shade behind Hannibal and St. Joe. It was a melancholy procession for the bulls. Union Pacific got mixed in with the rest, and went galloping down hill with them a quarter of a point at a stride.

When Mr. Gould wanted to knock Erie and New York Central he had his extension to the Lackawanna Railroad organized, and he continues to hold it over those stocks. When he wanted to depress Western Union he organized the American Union. When he wanted to menace the trunk lines, he built up his Wabash system. Now it is beginning to be plain to the street that he has things in his own clutches. To depress Western Union, it is only necessary for him to cut rates with the American Union. To advance Western Union he has only to cease the war. To put down the prices of trunk line stocks he has only to open a railroad war, or form a company ostensibly to build parallel roads. To put up the price, he has only to cease the war, and give out that the new parallel roads will not be built. He has so much wealth that he can manipulate the money market at will. Gould will be, beyond all question, the richest man in America in ten years.

THE Chilian Times tells a story about a flag. The Second Chilian Regiment lost their colors at the battle of Tarapaca, and meeting in the battle of Taena a portion of the force which was opposed to them in that fight, resolved to recapture their standard if it still existed, or failing that, to capture one from the enemy. They failed in both particulars, although some eighteen small flags fell into their hands, but no regimental colors, as the allies, instead of them, carried small flags into the fight. Some time after the battle of Taena, however, the lost colors were found in one of the churches, and were returned to the regiment amid much rejoicing.

THE California vineyards are creeping up the hill-sides, a large proportion of all the vines planted this year in Napa County being on the hills, and this is probably true of other counties where special attention is given to the wine grape. One of the best judges in the State estimates that the grape and raisin crops of 1880 will exceed those of any other year by 50 per cent. He places the wine crop at 12,000,000 gallons, with a probability of more rather than less. The phylloxera is only working on small areas.

Ancient Customs in the New World.

AT evening the gentle shepherd of New Mexico leads his flock from high pastures, where the precipitation of moisture is greatest and, therefore, grass is freshest, to the fold, or corral, in the valley. It is precisely the pattern of fold abounding in Palestine and still to be seen on the outskirts of Alexadria—an inclosure made by crooked stakes driven in the ground, poorly held together by strips of rawhide. No two are of the same length. All were twisted and gnarled in the growing, and lean out of the perpendicular. A shabby fence, uglier than every thing except a mud fence, which the reader knows is the superlative of ugliness. By the light of the moon we noted the fashion of the shepherd's Cain-and-Abel suit of goatskin; and, instead of the classic crook, wreathed in garlands gathered in flowery meadows, the Rocky Mountain Endymion guarded his flock with a shotgun and bowie-knife, less fearful of the wolf than of his own thieving countrymen.

We observe another Asian custom here, that of sleeping on the roofs in summer. The heavenly nights invite one out, and the flat house-top is a much pleasanter place to make one's bed than the cellar-like interior, with its earthy scents. The sluggard Mexican, who has killed the long hours of the common enemy by dozing in the sun, rouses toward sunset and spreads out the colchon, or wool mattress, or a bed of skins if they are very poor. The stairway is a rickety ladder, leaning against the outer wall of the mud house, and the rapidity and ease with which the natives go up and down is surprising. I have seen women carry jars of water on their head, not spilling a drop, as they ascend the ladder, touching it only with their feet. The old people—mummies of the time of Cheops—go to bed at sunset; a little later the children and chickens hop up the loose rounds; then the lord of the estate and his dusky spouse, with her cat; and lastly the ratty dogs, moving nimbly, as the trained ones of the circus. Haul up the ladder and the castle is secure. There is no fear of rain. There is no dew, no fog or mist, to blur the clear shining of the stars above. The low wind is the very breath of heaven; the bright night is filled with sleep.

So slept the Saviour of the world on the housetop of Lazarus, at Bethany, whither He had walked in the cool of the day. Looking from that lowly bed toward the many mansions of His Father's house, well might the homeless guest utter the pathetic cry: "The foxes have holes and the birds of the air have nests; but the Son of Man hath not where to lay His head."

WE have the oft repeated testimony of many farmers, who have tried the experiment, that changing the locality of seed increases the productiveness of many kind of crops. It is therefore reasonable (although the why and wherefore is not generally understood) that there is something in it, although, after all, I think that equally good if not better results may be obtained by a judicious system of selection, culture and rotation on different sections of the same farm. It is my opinion, corroborated by experience and observation, that a system of selecting seed and planting only the most perfect of its kind, would obviate all difficulty and complaint of poor crops and seed, arising from this source. For example, in planting potatoes, plant none less in size (and those whole) than a hen's egg, and no overgrown tubers, and follow this with a regular rotation, not growing related crops on the same ground oftener than once in three to five years. Select the best, most perfect kernels of wheat, sowing only such; also the best and most perfect of all kinds of seeds, taking pains to save from the best representatives of the variety. Instead of deterioration, as we often hear, improvement in both quantity and quality will then result. I know farmers who, instead of pursuing such a course, sell the best because it brings a better price in market, and then they go to others for seed, or plant such as is left of their own after the best is disposed of, and then complain that their crops deteriorate, whereas, had they pursued the course indicated above, in a few years their crops, as well as their purses, would greatly improve.—Cor. Country Gentleman.

MR. BUCKLAND, the well-known naturalist, has made a report on the English salmon fisheries, which contains some interesting information. The salmon, he says, can probably detect colors, and indeed this belief will commend itself to every fisherman who, having missed his fish with a gaudy fly, has at last succeeded in landing him with a fly of some neutral tint. The young salmon have an inherited dread of a net, and Mr. Buckland found that the artificially reared salmonidæ rushed about their nursery in great terror when a net was placed in it, although they were not disturbed by other objects. The teeth of the salmon show, on Darwinian principles, that he is a voracious fish; yet when taken out of fresh water nothing is ever found in his belly. It is suggested that his digestion is very rapid, and fragmentary herrings have been found on one or more occasions in salmon caught at sea. The Dutch salmon, which are stout as befits their nationality, are generally believed to feed upon smelts; but Mr. Buckland thinks that the fish in fresh water feed upon their own fat as bears do. They will often take a worm, however, and a salmon roe was once a favorite bait on Scotch rivers. Though so strong a fish, the salmon's best gait is only three miles an hour. Mr. Buckland believes that these fish are liable to sunstroke in hot weather. He also thinks that the salmon is only a river trout, which has acquired a habit of going to the seaside every year, and that his larger size is owing to the quantity of good food found there. In support of this, Mr. Buckland adduces the fact that salmon can not spawn except in fresh water, and he adds that they discover their native river by the sense of smell; so that a change in the garbage arrangements of New York might stock the Hudson with salmon.—New York Sun.

IT has been a subject of frequent discussion, how to interest the young folks in agriculture. Doubtless much of the importance given to this subject has been gratuitous and undeserved, for the natural succession of the young men to the farms and labors of their retiring fathers does not seem to go by default, excepting in those places where there is nothing to be gained by the hardest labor but the hardest kind of a living from wornout and infertile fields. From such farms the young men naturally enough escape to the fertile West, but upon those where fair industry returns a bountiful reward and every comfort surrounds the homestead, there the young men remain and continue the work which has been begun by their fathers. But there is a method of making farm life attractive to boys and of interesting them so much in rural affairs as to draw them to the farm again in mature life, it may be after years of absence, while engaged in prosperous business in cities. Such a method has been put in practice by that exemplary institution known as the Elmira Farmers' Club. This club has offered prizes for the best plot of corn planted and tended wholly by boys under 16 years of age. The competition thus entered into by a large number of farmers' boys has created unusual enthusiasm and may prove to be the turning point in forming the courses of their future lives. When boys of 16 attend a farmers' club as the most interested of visitors, it may be safe to set it down that those boys will be farmers, and probably good, solid, enterprising and successful ones. It is an example for the widest imitation. Boys become such men as they are made by the circumstances into which they are brought. It would be a fortunate thing for farmers, if there were more such exemplary farmers' clubs as that of Elmira.—Rural New Yorker.

A COMBINED spy-glass and cane is now possible by a recent invention of Mr. Theodore Geiger, of Stuttgart. It consists simply of a concave eye-lens and a convex object-glass, each fastened by a clamp to the cane, with their axes in the same line. The longer focus than usual of the object-glass, and the space required between the lenses, necessitates a greater power than in ordinary field-glasses. The lenses are from 18 to 28 inches apart, and the object-glass is focused by sliding it along the cane to the right point.

INSTEAD of clipping the natural locks young ladies now glue a fringe of false hair across their foreheads. It is a wise economy. It saves their own crop.

BRIEFLETS.

—Temple of Honor night.

—The social event this evening will be the St. John-Conrad party.

—C. E. Moseley's family are wrestling with sickness, caused by catching severe colds.

—City Marshal Hogan is able to be up to-day, and expects soon to be on duty again.

—Rev. T. P. Sawin is to deliver his lecture on "An Old Proverb" at Brodhead next Monday evening.

—O. H. Fethers and Stanley B. Smith have returned from the Knights of Pythias gathering at Sparta.

—Fenner Kimball has so far recovered as to be able to get to his place of business, but is by no means rugged.

—The vagrants in the Police Court today numbered four. They were sentenced to two or three days each.

—A. M. Carter, of Johnstown, who has been in very poor health of late, is able now to ride out daily, and is gaining in strength.

—Mrs. Hayes and Mrs. Ella Hutson gave readings last evening in the church at Johnstown Center. There was a large attendance, and all seemed pleased.

—The Beloit folk have evidently still faith in Van Meter's mission work in Rome. The Baptist Sunday school there sent its January collection of pennies to help the cause along.

—Officer Pratt last evening arrested Thomas Scott and Andrew Bemis, and to-day they were sentenced to five days each, for indulging in disorderly drunks and drunken disorderlies.

—A postal from C. N. Vankirk, to R. R. Lee, says Cap is getting along as well as could be expected, and is out of danger. Mr. C. N. Vankirk expects to start for home Sunday or Monday.

—The Janesville Commandery Knights Templar had a most interesting time last evening. Visitors were from Harvard and Evansville, and degrees were conferred upon eight new aspirants.

—Parties who intend visiting Washington to attend the inauguration of President-elect General Garfield, will find it to their advantage by calling at the Gazette office before the 15th inst.

—McKey Bros. have some fine new signs to decorate the front of the great dry goods store. E. J. Kent, who painted them, is to-day decorating the West wall of the building also with big letters.

—Col. R. M. Littler, of Davenport, who is a wide-awake dairymen in all respects, tells us that in the State of Iowa this year there will be built 150 new creameries, which will make the total number reach fully 400.

—Next Monday is Valentine's day, and the piles of cheap chromos and frilled Cupids on the bookstore counters are being pawed over and over in the search for darts just suited to touch the hearts of the victims.

—A stranger filched a pair of mittens in Clyde Bros.' store last evening, and was arrested by Officer Smith, and the property recovered. He gave his name as George Johnson. This afternoon Justice Nolan sentenced him to thirty days in jail.

—Several drunken fellows of a baser sort were canvassing the First ward, this afternoon, for stray nickles with which to get more drink. One of them was so bold as to walk into houses without ringing or knocking. Officer Ed. Smith captured four of the gang.

—Charles Swan, who for some time has been in the employ of Broughton Bros., of Brodhead, is to soon take a position in Eldredge's drug store here, and Charles Clark will step out and up in Dr. Loomis' office, with the intention of mastering the medical profession. The change will probably take place about first of March.

—O. E. Merill, while helping move some machinery in his shop at Beloit, Wednesday, was injured quite seriously, being knocked down, rendered unconscious, and his face being badly cut, but luckily no bones were broken. The same day Dr. H. Hunt, of the same place, tumbled down stairs, and dislocated his left shoulder.

—The other day it cost ex-Ald. Church about $5 because he expressed his opinion of Lawrence Sennett in too forcible a manner, and yesterday afternoon Mr. Sennett was charged with having expressed abusive words concerning the Church, but was discharged, the prosecution being unable to fix definitely the date of the alleged offense.

—The thirteenth annual meeting of the Rock County Sunday School Convention is to be held in the Congregational church, Clinton, next Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. A large number of Sunday school workers are expected to be present, and an interesting programme has been arranged. It is desired that every school in the county should be represented, and send a report of the school.

—Remenyi gave another entertainment in Beloit Monday night, having failed to make railroad connections to reach Milwaukee for his engagement there. He says it is the first time in America he has failed to keep an engagement. It is too bad that he didn't put in that spare evening here, instead of Beloit, but probably the remembrance of two former occasions on which Janesville folk wouldn't turn out to hear him, made him feel timid about making another experiment. If he had a bloodhound with him, to show on the street, it would be sure to fill the house.

—The Congregational church at Whitewater, which burned day before yesterday, was an exact model of the Congregational church here. When the latter church was dedicated here the Whitewater pastor was among the officiating clergymen, and was so well pleased with the appearance of the church, that he praised it so highly to his own people, that they became enthusiastic, and determined to build one exactly like it, only smaller. They did so, and even had an organ put in of the same style and make of the one in the church here. Now both Janesville church and Whitewater church have been burned. The Janesville church has been rebuilt, and it remains to be seen whether the Whitewater people will want, in rebuilding, to use the church here as a copy. They ought to, to make the coincidence complete.

—The Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York, is one of the marvels of the time, not alone in the size of its business, but in the rapidity and steadiness of its growth. Its annual statement for 1880 published in another column, shows $91,735,786 assets; over $11,000,000 surplus; $17,140,694 income; more than $306,000,000 insurance in force, and $13,160,694 paid on policies last year. This exhibit is an exemplification of the mutual plan in life insurance in its purity, and shows what can be accomplished by wise and honest management. The Mutual Life requires no other guaranty for the future than its past. Its members stand upon an equal footing, all insuring each other and jealously guarding the common interest. The company has never wavered in its strict adherence to sound and safe principles and it has so combined conservatism with liberality as to protect its old policy holders and at the same time gain new accessions to its ranks. The widows and orphans of the country, who have been beneficiaries under its matured policies can tell better than figures the good that it has accomplished.

THE WEATHER.

REPORTED BY PRENTICE & EVENSON, DRUGGISTS.

The thermometer at 6 o'clock last night stood at 30 degrees above; at 1 o'clock A. M. to-day at 28 degrees above; at 7 o'clock A. M. at 29 degrees above, and at 1 o'clock P. M. at 30 degrees above. Cloudy. Slight snow.

A JANESVILLE STAR.

Horace Herbert's comedy company which is to be here for a week, commencing one week from next Monday evening, has for its leading stars, Frank Cotton, and J. W. Burton. The latter is well known here as Will Ebbetts, and graduated from the High School here at the age of fourteen, he being now twenty-nine years of age. He has been on the stage since the age of eighteen, belonging first to a company of which Helen Western was the star. The next season he was the second comedian at the Pittsburgh opera house. After this he travelled through the oil regions with Frank and Nellie Tannehill, and made his first hit as an Irish comedian, in which he now takes high rank. The next season he went South. In the fall of 1876, he appeared in New York at the Grand Opera House, under the management of Poole & Donnelly, and afterwards in other theatres of that city. Afterwards engaged with Harry and Rose Watkins, playing at Baltimore, Washington, Richmond, and Norfolk. In the fall of 1877 he was engaged in the support of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Florence in the "Mighty Dollar." In St. Louis he made a remarkable hit as "Marks" in "Uncle Tom's Cabin." Still later he went through the south playing under the management of J. H. Huntley, and this season he is with Horace Herbert. His old friends here will be glad to see him and hear him, before the footlights in his old home again.

VACCINATION.

To the Editor.

In your last issue I noticed an article pointing to the necessity of vaccination among our school children. The idea is a good one, provided a pure "bovine virus" is used. But vaccination as usually performed is a much greater curse than small pox; meaning simply the transfer of one person's blood into that of another. It is a well known fact, that any constitutional vice, or hereditary taint, may be thus transmitted from one individual to another, to say nothing of those graver forms of transmitted diseases with which the physician so often has to contend among entirely innocent persons. Neither is the popular idea "that virus taken from a little child is pure," to be trusted; the child is just what its parents, or foreparents have made it. Beside, that time in life when the blood of a human being is purest is between the ages of 20 and 30 years, provided always, that proper sanitary conditions have obtained. To say the least of it, the promiscuous intermingling of the blood of children, through the process of vaccinating, is pernicious and unnecessary, as pure virus taken directly from the udder of a healthy heifer, is always obtainable, and only requires care and a little trouble to be had in abundance. By all means vaccinate, but in so doing, avoid if possible, any, and every risk to the children, whose lives and future depend so largely upon those who now have control of them.

A RESIDENT OF JANESVILLE

Visited a clothing store the other day to purchase an Overcoat. He saw one at $18.00 that suited him pretty well, but that was more than he wanted to pay. Seeing it was a little late in the season the proprietor would sell it to HIM for $15.00. A chassez to the door brought the price down to $12.00, and a shy to the sidewalk got the Overcoat at an offer of $10.00. A drop of nearly 50 per cent from price asked, which is a fair sample of closing out at cost sales. Our goods are marked in plain figures to-day at the same prices we have asked since September, and we

WILL FORFEIT $50

To any one who can furnish proof of purchasing articles at one cent less than price. On January 12th we made a discount of 20 per cent. on all at $20.00 and over. All underwear at $1.00 and over. All winter gloves, mittens, caps, mufflers, wristlets, and knit Jackets of every description. Fifteen per cent discount on all overcoats under $20.00, and underwear under $1.00. We have the notice posted in the store, and make the discount whether requested or not, as we shall certainly treat all alike. We wish to carry over as few goods as possible. There will be over two months more of winter in which these goods can be used to good advantage. You don't care how much the goods cost us if they look cheap to you. Call and see them at.

Throat, Lungs, Heart, Stomach, Liver.

Head, nerves, kidneys, bladder, womb, and blood affections of the urinary organs, gravel, scrofula, rheumatism, catarrh, asthma, bronchitis, dyspepsia, &c.

DR. PRICE'S REPUTATION!

Has been acquired by candid, honest dealing and years of successful practice.

My practice, not one of experiment, but founded on the laws of Nature, with years of experience and evidence to sustain it, does not tear down, make sick to make well; no harsh treatment, no trifling, no flattering. We know the cause and the remedy needed; no guess work, but knowledge gained by years of experience in the treatment of Chronic Diseases exclusively; no encouragement without a prospect. Candid in our opinions, reasonable in our charges, claim not to know everything or cure everybody, but do lay claim to reason and common sense. We invite the sick, no matter what their ailment, to call and investigate before they abandon hope, make interrogations and decide for yourselves; it will cost nothing as consultation is free. Visits made regularly.
